ty openly bostile to the social organization of fitteen States of the Union. Besides this, the Governor of Alabama is instructed to issue writs of election and summon a Convention of the people of that State within forty days after it is ascertained that a black republican is elected to the Presidency; and the Virginia Legislature has also moved in the same direction We may expect the other Southern States soon to follow; and the fanatics of the North will soon begin to perceive that there is deep truth in what we have so often told them. Lincoln's "irrepressible conflict" cannot be carried on without resistance and bloodshed.

GENEROSITY OF THE PRINCE OF WALES. -The Prince of Wales has been scattering presents with a liberal hand during his tour in the United States. Wherever he received any peculiar mark of kindness or attention, he does not appear to have failed in dispensing favors in recognition of the same. In this respect he has varied from the course of the princes who preceded him-the Ambassadors from Japanwho confined their presents to the handsome do nation made to the police of the leading cities, The Prince presented a gold pencil to Capt. Leonard, of the Metropolitan Police, it is true, in return for some special attention paid him; but beyond this he has not recognized the ser vices of the force, who, of course, he fully understood were doing nothing more than their duty in preserving order on an occasion of great excitement. He is more accustomed to these things than our Japanese visiter.

His generosity to the servants of the Fifth Avenue Hotel was indeed princely, if it be true, as alleged, that he left $700 to be distributed among them. His liberality to the crew of the Harriet Lane, to whom he presented $300, was on a like scale, and his recognition of the attentions of Captain Faunce was handsomely demonstrated by the present of asplendid gold chronometer. To the Superintendent of the Richmond and Fredericksburg Railroad, who piloted him to and from Richmond, he gave a magnificent breastpin set in diamonds. Madam Leduc, the sister of Mr. Spencer, who entertained him during his shooting excursion on the prairies, was the recipient of a costly bracelet. In short, everywhere he went he lett a souvenir of his visit and an acknowledgment of kindness received. During his brief visit to this city he made some very large purchases from Bail, Black & Co., left some beavy orders with Brady, the photographer, and became a customer of several other establishments also, thus dispensing his favors and his gold pretty extensively on all sides.

A curious incident occurred during the progress of the Prince up Broadway on the day of his arrival, which proves him to be possessed of much discernment and good sense. An enthusiastic sovereign rushed towards the carrisge, and, extending his hand, vociferously prayed God to bless the Prince, to bless his mother, and to bless every one and everything, in general terms. The Prince smiled, and good naturedly took the extended hand of the enthupiastic citizen. A policeman, emboldened by the condescension, then offered his hand also; but the Prince drew himself up and turned away, at the same time apologizing to the Mayor, who sat beside him, and explaining that he recognized the distinction between a private citizen offering his hand, through a feeling of hospitality and welcome, and a public servant on duty doing the same thing. This little incident argues an amount of discrimination and self-possession on the part of the Prince not often to be found in so young a man.

PROGRESS OF REVOLUTION AT THE SOUTH .- The black republican party at the North, with their platform and their programme, and their revolutionary books and the revolutionary speeches of their leaders, have been gradually driving the South into a revolution of a different kind from their own, and now the questien seems to be coming to a crisis there. The elections in South Carolina show that that State is in favor of secession. Mr. R. B. Rhett, Jr., proprietor of the Charleston Mercury—the leading organ of the secessionists has been elected to the Legislature, and men of similar sentiments have been elected in opposition to Unionists. A serenade was given by the people a few days ago to the successful candidates at Charleston, and among them to Mr. Rhett, of the Mercury, who, in acknowledgment of the compliment, said "they were in the midst of a revolution," and added, "if there is any policy in suffering ourselves to be paralyzed by a romantic love of the Union, which, however admirable once, is at this time a source of apprehension and peril, I cannot see it." Mr. Lowndes, formerly a Union man, scorned the imputation that had been maliciously thrown out against him that he was a "submissionist," and he thanked the citizens that they had vindicated him, by his election, from that slander. Mr. M. P. O'Conner, who had also been a strong Unionist, called upon the people, in his speech. not to wait till Lincoln, if elected, does some unconstitutional act, and has the machinery of government to sustain him, but to regard his relection itself as a violation of the constitu tion, an act of revolution begun by the people of the North." Gen. Simons and other citizens gave utterance to like sentiments. Thus does the "irrepressible conflict" begin to assume a formidable appearance, and an hour of peril is at hand. The conservatives in the North are quarrelling about precedency on union tickets, and in some States are refusing to have any union, while revolution at the North and revolution at the South are looming up from either horizon, like two black porten tous clouds rushing into terrible collision, and destined to explode with destructive effects when they meet in the zenith. Never before was such wanton, suicidal folly exhibited in any country in the world. The black republicans have proclaimed war to the knife against the Institutions of the South, and are driving even its conservative men to desperation; and yet men in the North, professing to be conservatives, are helping the republicans to succeed. and thus contributing, as far as in them lies, to bring about a dissolution of the Union, and all the fearful consequences that must ensue from such a catastrophe.

pr. Doremus began his lecture by observing that be felt honored in being permitted to be the first to open the interesting lectures of the season, and expressed the hope that the votaries of me dical science would gather fresh stores of useful information from the eminent men who would from time to time address them. He soon after proceeded to perform some very interesting chemical experiments, many of which are familiar to our readers, especially those who are students, from their frequent description. The most interesting of these related to the nature and properties of carbonic sold gas, which he experimented upon in its three forms .- First, the gas in its gaseous state, next in its liquid form, and lastly in its solid form. In its latter condition he showed that the gas was very cold to the touch, even more so than snow. In the course of his able exdensed osseription, he alluded to the delusion of Fahren-heit, who beliaved that when he had reached zero he had got to the lowest point of the barometer, and that there could be no more heat after such a degree. But modern science had overturned the idea of Fahrenheit, and now shows that we may go down to 220 degrees, or oven 240 below zero. He then proceed with numerous very in-teresting experiments with carbonic sold, mercury, water, either, &c., his large audience giving him their silent sitention.

At the conclusion of these useful experiments, which elicited much applause, Professor Dorsmus proceeded to descant on the nature of medical practice and the duties of those young men who have set themselves apart for studying medical science. The field of this study, he said, was wide. Anatomy was one of the principal things to be learned, and for this the student had not only to studying wide studying medical science. The field of this study, he said, was wide. Anatomy was one of the principal things to be learned, and for this the student had not only to study drawings, but he was absolutely compelled to deal with the human body itself. A good physician must or ought also understand botany, therapeutics, chemistry, psycology and all the other sciences which the to his profession. And he should not only be skilled now to treat the sick, but he should also give some attention to meteorology—a science that is full of heavity and interest to the applying student. He next siluded to the excellent advantages for diffusing information possessed by the college in their well arranged and extensive anatomical museum, which was copied from Guy's Hospital, London, and pointed out to the student the alvantages to be derived from the careful study of the varied chiests of interest therein contained.
